Land and Labor Acknowledgement

We acknowledge that SSU's Department of Theatre Arts and Dance stands on the unceded ancestral homeland of the Coast Miwok and Southern Pomo tribes, now known as the Federated Indians of Graton Rancheria, whom are the original inhabitants of Cotati and Rohnert Park in Sonoma County and an integral and active community in the Bay Area and beyond.

We affirm their sovereign rights as First Peoples and pay our respects to the ancestors, elders and relatives of the Coast Miwok and Southern Pomo Communities. We honor these ancestral grounds we are gathered upon, the strength, wisdom, and artistry of these communities, and the many indigenous people who have paved a way for artists, cultural workers, and change-makers.

We also acknowledge the forced enslavement of Africans and their descendants whose unpaid labor built much of the wealth of the United States. We honor the vast cultural, creative, intellectual, embodied wisdom and knowledge of the African diaspora and the many ways these lineages have shaped our understanding of transformative art-making, and liberatory practice.

We also recognize that words are not enough, so we invite you to join us in learning more about Sogorea Te Land Trust, the land back movement, and reparations for people of African descent.

As audience members, you are collaborators and co-creators in tonight's experience, so we invite you to participate in ways that feel authentic and agency-full, for you. We invite you to say hello to your neighbor, to move your body, breathe in and out freely in this shared space, hoot and holler when you feel called to, and to engage in the transformative and community-building

Characters

Usnavi de la Vega is the owner of a small bodega in Washington Heights called De La Vega Bodega.

Nina Rosario is the first in her family to go to college. She is admired in the community.

Benny works at the taxi dispatch of Nina's father, Kevin. He dreams of opening his own business.

Vanessa Morales works at Daniela's salon. She dreams of getting out of the barrio and getting an apartment downtown.

Abuela Claudia ("abuela" means "grandmother") is the loving grandmother to all in the barrio. She looked after Usnavi when his parents died. She and her mother moved from Cuba to New York in 1943 when she was a child.

Sonny de la Vega is Usnavi's younger cousin and works with Usnavi in the bodega. He has a thoughtful side that yearns for social justice.

Daniela is the owner of the salon where the neighborhood women come to gossip. She is very bold and loves the community.

Carla works at Daniela's salon and is her close friend.

Kevin Rosario is Nina's father, who owns the taxi cab service: Rosario's.

Camila Rosario is Nina's mother, who co-owns the taxi cab service.

Piragua Guy (Piragüero) is the owner of a small piragua stand that competes with a soft-serve truck.

Graffiti Pete is a graffiti artist. He is good friends with Sonny.

Director's Notes

Marie Ramirez Downing

Stage Director

When I began rehearsal for In The Heights, I was invigorated! I believed we had a very talented and diverse cast and an artistic team that not only had positive energy and were ready to work, but I had a sense that the play really meant something to them personally. As I got to know them, that was confirmed as they started telling personal stories of their connection to the show that included what family meant to them and who in the play they most identified with. Some mentioned the character Usnavi searching for answers from his ancestors in the Dominican Republic seeking to return to his native country. Others mentioned Abuela Claudia a Cuban immigrant brought to the United States for a "better" life. Everyone had a character that inspired them, and they truly saw themselves in the story we were to tell. That's what makes doing this show with this special cast so much more powerful.

Getting to opening night was not an easy feat. Lynne and I would hear, "It's such a large musical!", "It will take a lot resources!", "Do we have the actors for that?", "Will we do the Latinx community justice?". These were just some of the questions that many of us committed to producing Heights had to face. But I kept saying to myself, I am a part of this community. I know how to tell this story, I have lived it! I am still living it as a Mexican American woman who went through many of the things the characters are struggling with or dreaming about. Through, education, planning, tears, and even despair we finally found so much joy, and we fought to tell this important story in the way the creators of the musical thought it should be told. Through music and dance, this multicultural, multi-generational, and bilingual play is the heart of the Hispanic and Latinx community here at Sonoma State (an HSI) and the larger Sonoma County area. This show was always meant to be a celebration of the diversity of people. I had a vision for representation from many groups on campus and beyond. We have criminology, nursing, psychology, history, business, music, and theatre majors in the show. We also have SSU alumni, a high school senior from Petaluma, 5th graders from Cali Calmecac Language Academy in Windsor and Hidden Valley Elementary School in Santa Rosa and members from the Sonoma County Theatre Community. Our cast represents America. We are finally here and this story will be told! Lin-Manuel Miranda said in an interview, "There's a song in Heights called "Hundreds of Stories," but there's millions of stories — from the cultural specificities of the Puerto Rican American experience, the Dominican American experience, the Cuban American experience." For me, it's the Mexican American experience. I am first generation college student like the character of Nina, and the first in my family to attend college and graduate with a college degree. That comes with a lot of pressure for many students who relate to balancing expectations from those "Back home" and the reality of the present. A Central Valley native, growing up in a bilingual home, always communing with my large family this story is the song in my heart and the pain in my soul from those that have left this earth and left me a legacy, and a history to uphold and shine light on. This show is one way I am doing that for those that have paved the way for many of us that are privileged to do what we love so freely.

As you watch the show, please ask yourself, "What is home to me?" Is it a place like a city or a country? Could it be wherever you feel like you can be yourself without judgement? A place where your close friends and family are? The characters in this play are searching for home, seeking a better life and following their dreams, and like many dreams, they do not come without challenges, hard decisions, and hard-work. Enjoy the show!

Special Thanks

Special Thanks to Lynne Morrow for her collaboration and dedication to the music direction in the show. Thank you Lynne- for your passion and commitment to producing this show and your mentorship and solidarity. Thank you to Anakarina Swanson, our amazingly talented choreographer for your friendship, partnership, and professionalism throughout this process. Heights would not be Heights, without your energy, creativity, and ideas. There were many who listened, championed, supported, and came to the rescue on many occasions since we announced we were going to do this play, you know who you are, and words can't express how much I appreciate your kind words and advisement. Just noting a few: Christine Cali, Jim Downing, Micha Espinosa, Cynthia Santos-DeCure, Matthew Paolucci, Sheila Bandyopadhyay, Laura Alamillo and the rest of the President's Hispanic Serving Institution Council Members, Natalia Nieves, Sylvia Soto, and the underrepresented faculty here at Sonoma State.

Lynne Morrow

Music Director

The very first musical sound heard in this show is a clave: CLACK-CLACK-CLACK CLACK-CLACK. That's Africa, knocking on the door of the Americas.

The show's community in Washington Heights is from many places in the Afro-Caribbean: Puerto Rico, Cuba and the Dominican Republic, even relatives from Chile.

These friends, shop owners on the same block in el barrio, are the life-blood of the community. The music that supports the surprising, twisting story is thrilling. Afro-Cuban rhythms like the martillo and tumbao, play along with Dominican rhythms like the merengue and bachata. More Afro-Cuban rhythms, guaguanco and rhumba, liven up the whole score.

This show, Lin-Manuel Miranda's first, is a love song to the Community.

As my last show here at Sonoma State University, In the Heights is my love song to this Community.

Choreographer

Creating movement and choreography for this show was an absolute thrill and a huge undertaking. With over half of the musical numbers being full blown dance sequences, I had my work cut out for me. Luckily, the music, the cast and the story gave me so much inspiration to pull from.

The bright, cultural representation of this show is refreshing and comfortable. As a proud Latina myself it was so wonderful to hear music familiar to what I heard in my childhood, to hear vernacular that I am familiar with and, to quote the song Pacencia Y Fe, "to see faces the same as mine."

The characters in this show seem so real and relatable and the stories that these characters have to share are universal of immigrant people, of first, second and third generation immigrants.

My goal for this project was to bring to life the colors of these cultures, the sense of community and the mixing of the old and the new. Traditional dances like Danza and the contemporary styles of Hip Hop, the social ambiance of Salsa and Bachata. The music and the cultures represented in this show really helped me influence the flavors and textures of the movement and the cast inspired me every day to challenge them and myself. I believe we have created a well-rounded experience for you to enjoy.

EVERT B. PERSON THEATRE AND IVES HALL are an extraordinary learning laboratory, fully-equipped live performance spaces containing professionally staffed costume and scene shops, where SSU students learn skills essential to the art of live dance, music and theater performance. For today's show, through performance-related coursework, the students have spent weeks in rehearsals, singing, acting, memorizing, dancing and more, under the mentorship of professional staff, designers, and faculty. We hope you enjoy the product of the students' learning and skill-building process.
